Executive Committee meets

The NCAA Executive Committee held its first meeting May 2-3 since it was expanded from 12 to 14 by the 1983 Convention. Recommendations from 19 sports committees and several financial matters topped the agenda in Kansas City, Missouri. A full report of the committee's actions will be published in the May 11 issue of The NCAA News.

Pressure in women's recruiting is building

By James A. Sheldon The NCAA News Staff

Mike Flynn, a former college assistant coach and now director of one of the nation's biggest girls' summer basketball camps, remembers the days when it was a big deal if a girl could shoot a jump shot or go behind her back with a dribble.

Marian Washington, who just finished her ninth year as women's basketball coach at Kansas, remembers the days when she had to recruit without any athletic aid to offer and could not visit recruits, and high school student-athletes had to pay their own way to visit colleges.

In the past decade, much of that has changed. Women's college basketball has improved steadily. And, as the quality of play has improved, so has the emphasis on recruiting.

This year's crop of high school seniors probably was more visible and better analyzed and pursued more aggressively than any other class in the history of women's basketball. Undoubtedly, the same will be true next year.

"The intensity in recruiting has changed drastically in the last few years," said Washington.

According to Flynn, that intensity was building even when women's college basketball still was entirely under the auspices of the Association for Intercollegiate Athletics for Women.

"During the two years before the NCAA came in, recruiting started to get heavy," he said. "People have said, 'Hey, the NCAA came into women's basketball and made it this intensive,' but that's not the case. It was headed in that direction anyway because of the growth of the sport."

Flynn has followed that growth since the early 1970s when he began coaching, later moving on to assistant's jobs at St. Joseph's (Pennsylvania) and Rutgers.

"The base of women athletes playing basketball has increased 10 times since then," he said. "Because of the bigger base, there are more good athletes, athletes who are quicker, stronger and bigger."

And the pressure to recruit those top athletes is increasing. In Flynn's words, "The game today belongs to the aggressive recruiter."

For a coach like Washington, changes in recruiting rules have opened many doors, both for coaches and student-athletes. However, she is concerned about potential abuse of the rules as the recruiting scene becomes more competitive.

"That is an obvious concern for many coaches," she said. "You find many coaches concerned about the tactics that are being used—the spin-off of some of the things the men have done to attract athletes and also have used against other schools."

Wrestling dispute resolved

By Michael V. Earle The NCAA News Staff

A five-year dispute over jurisdiction of amateur wrestling in the United States apparently has ended with the formation of a new national governing body for wrestling.

USA Wrestling, which evolved from the United States Wrestling Federation (USWF), was recognized April 16 by the United States Olympic Committee (USOC) as its Group A member at a meeting of the USOC House of Delegates. The new national governing body has assumed the management of amateur wrestling competition and has been scheduling several international events.

The formation of USA Wrestling ended a dispute between the USWF and the Wrestling Division of the Amateur Athletic Union (WD/AAU). Since the Amateur Sports Act of 1978, each Olympic sport except wrestling had come under the jurisdiction of a single governing body. The USOC recognized the USWF while the Federation International De Lutte Amateur (FILA) recognized the WD/AAU.

The denouement of the struggle began last July when USOC President William Simon declared that the USOC was "suspending" the WD/ AAU and acknowledging only the USWF.

The following month, Federal District Judge Ann Aldrich ordered the WD/AAU to stop exercising any of the powers of a national governing body. The judge's ruling against the WD/AAU, the governing body for the sport for more than four decades until 1982, resulted from a lawsuit brought by the USWF, which sought exclusivity in

Drawings held for '84 tickets

Approximately 33,000 envelopes and 132,000 applications, each bearing the required April 5 postmark, were received for tickets to the 1984 NCAA Division I Men's Basketball Championship semifinals and finals in Seattle, Washington.

The requests went into the annual drawing for tickets to the Final Four. Approximately 20,000 seats will be available to the general public. The remaining scats in the Kingdome's 39,000-seat basketball configuration will be reserved primarily for the participating teams and the National Association of Basketball Coaches.

Seattle officials held the special drawing April 19. The first name drawn was Lynn Matthews of Vancouver, Washington. Matthews, along with the others selected, will be receiving their tickets between May 1 and May 15, according to Bill Sears, the Kingdome's coordinator for the Final Four.

Ticket prices for the 1984 Final Four, which will be held March 31 and April 2, are $42.50, $32.50 and $22.50.

Select committee plans final report by early fall

The Select Committee on Athletic Problems and Concerns in Higher Education will be unable to complete its work prior to the August meeting of the NCAA Council and has adjusted its schedule to facilitate a final report early this fall

"Conflicts in meeting schedules at this busy time of year have decreased our attendance at the last two meetings of the committee," according to John P. Schaefer, president of the Research Corporation and executive director of the committee. "We are not willing to rush our deliberations and risk diminishing the usefulness of our report, so the committee has determined that it will take the time necessary to conclude its assignment."

The committee devoted its April 30-May I meeting in Chicago to a review of the tentative conclusions and recommendations it has reached thus far. It delayed discussion of the items on its agenda for that meeting dealing largely with athletics governance and financial matters—until its July meeting, when more of the committee members will be able to attend.

In the July 17-18 meeting at Monterey, California, the committee will attempt to deal with the remaining topics on its agenda. Schaefer then will present an interim report to the Council in August.

The committee will hold a final meeting in late August or early September to conclude its work and approve its final report, which will be presented to the Council in October. That will provide time for the Council to sponsor legislation to implement any of the committee's recommendations for consideration at the 1984 NCAA Convention.

King County Executive Randy Revelle and Seattle Mayor Charles Royer draw the first application for tickets to the 1984 Division I Men's Basketball Championship.

Comment

This recruit is of a different stripe, Tigers discover

Austin American-Statesman

We are duty bound to report that in these times of escalating costs and persistent obligation, there is such a thing as a free ride, after all.

Carven Holcombe took it in early April.

Holcombe is the bookend basketball talent to Rickie Winslow at Houston Yates. Recently, he jetted to Columbia, Missouri, ostensibly to study the feasibility of a college career at the University of Missouri. He spent two days there roaming the campus, seeing people and places. At the end of the visit, he told head coach Norm Stewart, sure, he'd love to come play for Missouri.

Catch 22 was that Holcombe couldn't play for Missouri, at least not for two years. He had other obligations. One day before he took his all-expenses-paid trip to Columbia. Holcombe signed a National Letter of Intent to play at Texas Christian University.

It turns out Holcombe signed his letter in secrecy, asking TCU coach Jim Killingsworth not to make the announcement for a few days. Then he dropped in on the unknowing Tigers, leading them to believe they were still in the recruiting hunt.

That's what you call deception.

Nothing legally wrong there, mind you. Remarkably, it doesn't go afoul of one of the NCAA's many recruiting guidelines. But in the matter of ethics, it slipped right smack into a gray area.

Carven knew what he was doing. His father Isaac knew what he was doing; and if Killingsworth didn't, maybe Killer should've made it his business to find out.

What did this act of deceit cost Missouri? Air fare to and from Houston, a hotel room for two nights, meals. You figure it out.

Columnary Craft

Bob Sundvold's pride hurts too much to bother with dollars and

"We're the dumbest asses in the world," said Sundvold, an assistant coach at Missouri. "This is what kind of profession it is. On a Sunday, he told coach Stewart he was going to come (to

The next day, Sundvold showed up in Houston for what he believed to be a grand recruiting coup. Front-runners in the race for Holcombe reportedly were Houston and Texas. Yct, here was Missouri, ready to swoop in and clean up. Not so fast there, Mis-

"I went down there and visited his father," Sundvold said. "He told me he (Carven) wasn't coming to Missouri. He said it was too far away from home. I asked who he was going to sign with. He said he hadn't made up his mind yet. So I left town.'

More deception. Keep in mind, now, that four days before, Holcombe had signed a legally binding contract with TCU.

It wasn't until a Tuesday — five days after the fact — that word got out it was darkhorse TCU who actually scored the coup. Texas' Bob Weltlich called it a three-ring circus. Houston's Guy Lewis said, by gosh, even he was surprised by this turn of events. And Guy's been through these recruiting woods for 27 years now.

What all this is, of course, is a sign of sickness in college athletics. Carven Holcombe took what the system gave him. No harm, no foul, the NCAA said. In the deplorable world of recruiting, there is give-and-take on both sides. Holcombe certainly wasn't the first to squeeze an extra trip out of the recruiters. He

It is the system that is askew here. The NCAA will slap a few wrists and hand out a few probations, but in the end, it essentially is powerless to police the college masses. Until the NCAA legislates more stringent penalties against coach, player and school, free rides will continue

UCLA passes resolution to end freshman eligibility

The University of California, Los Angeles, Faculty Legislative Assembly unanimously has passed a resolution calling for the UCLA administration to support a rule to abolish freshman eligibility in football.

The resolution was placed before the assembly, which is the legislative body of the Faculty Senate, by chemistry professor Charles M. Knobler, chairman of the Senate Committee on Intercollegiate Athletics.

It calls for UCLA, preferably in concert with other universities, to propose that the NCAA Convention adopt a rule that would achieve these goals: 1 Allow student-athletes to compete in varsity football only after they have completed 36 quarter units (or 24 semester units) of college credit; 2 -Require that students who compete in football complete their four seasons of competition within five years. Freshmen would not be restricted from practicing with the varsity

The athletic committee argued that current NCAA academic-eligibility rules do little to ensure that studentathletes benefit academically from their stay at a university. The rules that will take effect in 1986 will strengthen academic standards, the committee argued, but they are not a panacea.

Since normal admissions policies vary greatly across the country, all proposals for a general tightening of admissions standards must necessarily set a level that is too low for many universities. An admissions standard based on the predictions of a student's success at a university also fails to take into account the diversity of university standards, distinctions among majors within a single university and the difficulty in predicting the performance of less-gifted students, according to the committee statement.

The committee concluded that a rule that requires the completion of one year of college-course credit before a student is eligible for varsity competition is the most effective way encourage and enhance a student-athlete's academic progress . . . The rule is academically sound and easily administered. It is based on a student's record at the university, a record that is judged by university criteria.'

The UCLA resolution is limited to football. In speaking against a proposal to broaden its scope to all sports, Knobler said that the need for the rule was greatest in this sport. It involves a large number of freshmen, it is played during the initial academic term, and it is both physically and psychologically demanding.

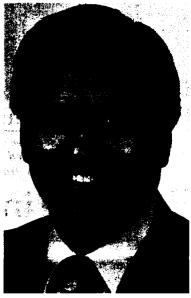

The original committee resolution urged the UCLA administration to act unilaterally if the NCAA did not establish a "specific and reasonable date" for implementation of the eligibility restriction. The assembly eliminated the call for unilateral action.

Kelly, Pollard capture scoring crowns

Virginia's Ralph Sampson is the most-honored college basketball player of 1983-indeed, most-honored of the 1980s and deservedly so. He's the first three-time consensus all-America in eight years and only the 16th in history.

Statistically, however, Texas Southern's Harry "Machine Gun" Kelly, men's Division I scoring champion (28.8) a second straight season, makes the biggest impact on the record book. He's the dominant scorer of the 1980s and just the third Division I player in history to reach 3,000 points for a career. At 3,066, Kelly ranks third behind Louisiana State's Pete Maravich (3,667 in 1968-1970) and Portland State's Freeman Williams (3,249 in 1975-1978).

The 6-7 Kelly is much more than a scorer. He's the only major collegian ever to reach 3,000 points and 1,000 rebounds (1,085). This season, Kelly finished seventh nationally in rebounding, nudging the 7-4 Sampson, 11.72 to 11.70 per game. Only one major-college scoring champion has finished higher nationally in rebounding—Rick Barry of Miami (Florida), fourth in 1965.

Sampson joins an exclusive club of three-time consensus all-Americas that starts with Purdue's John Wooden, winner of 10 NCAA championships as UCLA coach:

"C4:11 a 1:4"

Sampson majored in speech and communication, conquered his shyness, became a campus leader, managed the demands on his time and became a solid C-plus student, ready to graduate on time. "People say it's amazing how much he has changed," says coach Terry Holland. "I think it's amazing how much he has stayed the same. He's still a kid."

Kelly didn't even start playing basketball until a junior in high school in Jackson, Mississippi. He has grown three inches and 40 pounds (to 210) since arriving at Texas Southern. He had a horrible start this season, and unfriendly fans began calling him "Water Gun." After a holiday meditation, Kelly came back in a determined mood. He averaged 31.1 after January 3 (including a national one-game season-high 60 points) and led his team to the cochampionship of the Southwestern Athletic Conference Polite and soft-spoken, he easily is awed by his own accomplishments. After passing Oscar Robertson on the all-time list, he said, "Oscar was a great player, and it makes you feel kind of proud. That Maravich, he must have had two machine guns."

Kelly won the scoring title by a wide margin, with 58 more points than second-place Jeff Malone of Mississippi State, who played the same number of games.

Remember, three-point goals in this wildly experimental season were counted as two points in all national rankings to make it fair for all. As it turned out, Akron's Joe Jakubick jumps to 28.5 and South Florida's Charlie Bradley to 28.2 if you include three-pointers-not enough to overtake Kelly (more about the leading three-point shooters later).

X means exceptional

Wichita State sophomore Xavier McDaniel won the rebound championship by a huge margin, 14.4 to 12.9, over Franklin Giles of South Carolina State, who had 43 fewer rebounds in the same number of games. McDaniel is known to teammates and fans simply as "X," and that stands for exceptional. Only 6-7. McDaniel says, "I think I have an instinct for the ball, and I work hard for position." His coach, Gene Smithson, says, "Last year, I said Xavier was as good as Cliff (Levingston) and Antoine (Carr) were as freshmen, but I didn't know he'd come on quite this fast. He reminds me of Larry Bird (who also played in the Missouri Valley Conference), the way he seeks position on the boards.'

Harry Kelly

The odd couple

It would be no surprise if the national field-goal percentage champion were 6-7 and the national freethrow percentage champion were 6-0. But in 1983, it was exactly the

At 6-0, East Tennessee State senior guard Troy Lee Mikell very likely is the shortest field-goal accuracy champion in Division I history. Tim Kehoe of St. Peter's, the 1965 champion at 66.0 percent, was only 6-1 (not every height is listed for every early champion, but all were forwards or cen-Mikell's winning 67.5 percent is eighth highest in Division I history, and it's certain all seven above him were much taller.

At 6-7, Colorado senior forward Rob Gonzalez very likely is the tallest free-throw accuracy champion in Division I history (again, not every height is listed, but nearly every champion was a forward). He hit

Gonzalez is a Michigan State transfer, having played with Magic Johnson on the 1979 NCAA championship team. He is a native of Mikell, like McDaniel, is from Columbia, South Carolina. An exceptional leaper, Mikell averaged one dunk per game this season.

East Tennessee had a new coach this season—Barry Dowd, an Abe Lemons assistant in recent years and a head coach before that. "Coach Dowd has really helped me," Mikell says. "He has taught me to stay within my limitations and avoid bad shots. And his offense gave me a chance to go one-on-one more, which I do best." As it turned out, Mikell was named the Southern Conference player of the year.

Multicategory leaders Among the 64 players who scored at least 19 points per game, Sampson is the only one to average more than 60 percent from the field (60.4) and more than 11 rebounds per game (11.7). Six others are above 50 percent and 10 rebounds. Top scorer in this group is Oklahoma freshman Wayman Tisdale (24.5, 58.0 and 10.3). Next are Nevada-Las Vegas senior Sidney Green (21.9, 54.8 and 11.9), Louisiana Tech freshman Karl

La Taunya Pollard

Malone, San Diego State junior Michael Cage, Northestern junior Mark Halsel and Maine junior Jeff Cross. Mississippi State's Malone, the No. 2 scorer, heads another group of six who averaged at least 19 points, 50 percent from the field and 80 percent on free throws. Malone's figures were 26.8, 53.1 and 82.4 (see rankings page for all other figures). Career leaders

Sampson became the first major collegian in 15 years and the sixth in history (or since Houston's Elvin Hayes in 1968) to reach 1,500 rebounds along with 2,000 points for a career. The other four played in the 1950s when rebounds were far more numerous because of more missed shots. Sampson had 1,511 and 2,225. Three more seniors reached 1,000 rebounds and 2,000 points (bringing that historical total to 39-Green (1,276 and 2,073), North Texas State's Kenneth Lyons (1,020 and 2,291) and Kelly, as mentioned. Old Dominion's Mark West (1,113) and Louisville's Rodney McCray (1,029) also reached 1,000 in career rebounds. Seven other seniors reached 2,000 career points-Western Illinois' Joe Dykstra 2,248, Jeff Malone 2,142, Ball State's Ray McCallum 2,108, Marist's Steve Smith 2.077. Central Michigan's Melvin McLaughlin 2,071, Tennessee's Dale Ellis 2,065 and Villanova's John Pinone 2,024. At 5-9, McCallum may be the shortest of all the 140 Division 1 players in history to reach 2,000. Calvin Murphy, Niagara 1970, is listed as 5-10 but might have been a mite shorter.

Pepperdine's Orlando Phillips reached fifth on the all-time list in field-goal accuracy at 65.4. Dykstra reached ninth in free-throw accuracy at 88.5 percent and UCLA's Rod Foster 12th at 88.0. On a per-game basis, Kelly's 27.9 led all senior scorers, and Sampson's 11.4 led all senior rebounders.

Consensus all-America

Sampson and North Carolina sophomore Michael Jordan are the only unanimous all-America choices, making all four teams used in the consensus. Ellis and Georgetown's 7-0 sophomore Patrick Ewing both made three of the four teams. Memphis State sophomore Keith Lee was the fifth member of the consensus first team. Lee made two first teams, as did Tisdale, North Carolina's Sam Perkins and Notre Dame's John Paxson, but Lee also made two second teams—one more than Tisdale and Perkins (Paxson made no second teams). Joining Tisdale, Perkins and Paxson on the consensus second team are three who made the U.S. Basketball Writers 10-man first team-Green, Indiana's Randy Wittman and Houston's Clyde Drexler. Tisdale is the first freshman ever to make the Associated Press and writers' first teams. He made the United Press International second team and the National Association of Basketball Coaches third team. Men's team leaders

Houston is the only double champion in the team rankings—in scoring margin (17.4) and won-lost percentage (.912 on 31-3). Boston College won in scoring offense (84.3, edging Syracuse), Kentucky in field-goal percentage (55.6), Wyoming in FG percentage defense (41.6, nudging Virginia), Wichita State in rebound margin (8.8), Princeton in scoring defense (52.0) and Western Illinois in free-throw percentage (77.5). "Wade-ing" in talent

Long Beach State senior LaTaunya Pollard, the Division I scoring champion, closed out a stellar career by winning the 1983 Wade Trophy, awarded annually since 1978 to the nation's outstanding women's college basketball player. Pollard, a threetime all-America, averaged 29.26 points per game, nearly matching the record 29.29 by Clemson's Barbara

Kennedy in 1982. Last, but certainly not least, Pollard was chosen a member of the Naismith committee's first-ever women's all-America team (more about the Naismith award later).

Rebound champ Deborah Mitchell's name also can be found in a couple of places on the 1983 individual single-game high rebounding list. The 6-2 Mississippi College junior pulled down 25 and 27 rebounds in two games this season. Her 16.0 average breaks the record 14.7 by 6-8 Anne Donovan of Old Dominion in Tennessee Tech's Lydia Sawney, the field-goal percentage champion, is, at 5-11, the shortest among the top 21 players in that category. A senior majoring in medical technology, Sawney is better known on the team for her tenacious defense, though her 66.8 field-goal shooting probably has changed that. Sawney was named the team's best defensive player as a junior, her first season with the Tennessee Tech squad (she transferred from Nicholls State).

Eastern Kentucky's Lisa Goodin ioins Deborah Mitchell as a statistical champion who will return to college basketball next year. Goodin, a 5-6 junior, hit a record 91.3 percent in free-throw accuracy, breaking the 87.2 by Boston University's Val DePaola (75 of 86).

Multicategory leaders

Of the 64 players who averaged at least 20 points per game, two seniors-San Diego State's Judy Porter and McNeese State's Pat Jean-scored 20 or more points, grabbed at least 12 rebounds and shot 60 percent or better from the field. Porter (22.6, 12.2 and 60.2) and Jean (20.7, 13.7 and 62.5) can, by a very slight stretch of the figures, be joined by Kentucky senior all-America Valerie Still. Still, also a Wade Trophy finalist and member of the Naismith team, averaged 25.0 points and 12.0 rebounds, but came in just under 60 percent (59.9) in field-goal shooting. Two others are above 60 percent and 12 rebounds— Lamar junior Kara Audery (64.6 and 12.3) and Naismith Award winner Anne Donovan (61.4 and 14.4). Donovan's selection as the recipient of the first women's Naismith (a men's Naismith has been awarded for 15 years) was hailed as "an historic event" by her coach, Marianne Stanley, who added, "Anne is the epitome of the scholar-athlete."

Three players achieved 20 and 12 averages in scoring and rebounding, respectively - Debra Temple of Delta State (28.0 and 15.6), Karen Elsner of Richmond (22.9 and 12.5) and Mercer's Emma Mumphery (21.8 and 12.7), also a Wade Trophy finalist.

Women's team leaders

Only one of the teams in the Women's final four-Southern Cal,

Louisiana Tech, Georgia and Old Dominion-won a statistical championship. That was Old Dominion in rebound margin at 17.3. The only multicategory champion, Cheyney State, won scoring defense (51.9), scoring margin (29.0) and field-goal percentage defense (35.7). Brigham Young won scoring offense with an 88.5 average, followed by national champion Southern Cal at 85.8. Oral Roberts took won-lost percentage with a 26-1 record (losing only to Memphis State), followed by Louisiana Tech and Southern Cal with two losses each. Both of Tech's losses were to the Women of Troy, who themselves lost once to the Lady Techsters and once to Long Beach State. Maryland's 52.9 percent is tops in field-goal shooting, while Stanford won at 76.1 percent in freethrow accuracy.

How do the champions' figures stack up against the highs in 1982the first for NCAA women? Scoring offense is up from 87.9 in 1982. So are free-throw percentage and rebound margin (74.8 and 15.4, respectively, in 1982). Field-goal percentage has risen slightly, from 52.9. Scoring defense has improved as well, from 53.5 to 51.9. Scoring margin and field-goal percentage defense are down, however, from a respective 33.0 and 34.8 to 29.0 and 35.7.

An experimental year

The Experimental Era turned out to be a one-season thing,

Under 1984 guidelines from the NCAA Men's Basketball Rules Committee, no more than two conferences may experiment with the three-point field-goal—a far cry from 1983, when 80 teams in nine conferences used the three-pointer (and 108 in all used experimental rules).

Who was the country's top threepoint shooter? Well, using a minimum of at least one three-pointer made per game, it was North Carolina State's Terry Gannon at 58.9 percent. Using a minimum of 20 three-pointers made, it was Indiana's Ted Kitchel at 65.6 percent. Amazingly, Gannon shot only 41.1 percent (23-for-56) from shorter distances, and Kitchel just 49.2 percent from shorter distances. In fact, of the 12 with at least 20 made who shot at least 50 percent, 11 shot worse from shorter distances (all but Rick Fields of Indiana State):

Ted Kitchel, Indiana 21 Randy Davis, N.C. Charlotte . 27 John Hempel, Massachusetts . 24 Steve Rivers, Maryland 22 Chip Engelland, Duke 41 Larry Huggins, Ohio State ... 21 Othell Wilson, Virginia 29 Marc Campbell, Clemson 37 Rick Fields, Indiana State 34 Marc Quesenberry, East. increase was coming in 1983 regardless of experimental rules. The 12 conferences using either a shot clock or a three-point goal, or both, added about one point to the increase. The scoring increase reverses a sevenyear downward trend.

National scoring ended at 138.66 points per game (both teams combined, all games involving at least one of the 274 Division I teams) and this does include all threepointers. That is an increase of 3.58 points per game over te final 1982 average of 135.08—lowest in 30 years. This breaks down to 140.80 for the 108 experimental teams and 137.22 for the 166 teams using the same old rules (or 60.6 percent of Division I).

Only 8,375 three-pointers were made nationally, so this experiment added only 8,375 points to the national total of more than one million points (if they were counted as two points, national scoring would have been 137.61). Three-pointershelped reduce the national field-goal accuracy mark to 47.66 percent (vs. 47.91 in 1982). Free-throw accuracy also dropped, to 68.47. The shot clocks nelped increase the number of field-goal attempts per game.

NCAA Division I tournament scoring declined a seventh straight season, reaching 125.27 per game lowest since 1952's 123.75. Defense and tight games prevailed. In fact, 16 games were decided by three points or fewer-an all-time high for cliffhangers.

N.C. State's cliffhangers

National champion North Carolina State incredibly won four NCAA tournament games by two points or less—and one of these was in double overtime. This is twice as many such games as any previous NCAA champion (five champions won twice by two or less or in overtime, or both-North Carolina in 1982, Marquette in 1977. Texas-El Paso in 1966. North Carolina in 1957 and Indiana in 1953).

The Wolfpack lost 10 games most of any NCAA champion-but it shouldn't be forgotten that the champions had a 6-4 record against 10 opponents ranked No. I nationally at the time they met.

Conference leaders

The combination of both threepointer and clock proved the most potent in producing higher scoring. All five conferences using both increased. The Atlantic Coast, with the shortest three-point distance (listed as 19 feet to the backboard but only 17-9 to the center of the goal from the top of the key-two feet shorter than any other conference). led in three-point accuracy at 42.66 percent and in scoring at 77.56 per game, up 12.77 over 1982. The Southeastern led in field-goal accuracy with 50.39 percent, the Western Athletic in field-goal percentage defense at 45.74 and the ECAC South in scoring defense at 63.335 (nudging the WAC's 63.341). The Missouri Valley was second in scoring at 74.74. Men's Division II leaders

Danny Dixon, 6-4 Alabama A&M senior, won the Division II scoring title by a huge margin, 33.7 to 26.3, over Merrimack's Joe Dickson, who had 201 fewer points in the same number of games. The rebound championship went to David Binion, 6-6 North Carolina Central senior, 16.0 to 15.3 over Livingstone's Adrian Wright. Binion also shot 62.9 percent from the field (No. 7 in the nation) and scored at a 22.4 pace (No. 14).

Rudy Burton, 6-4 junior forward at Elizabeth City State, won in fieldgoal accuracy at 70.6 pecent to 68.6 for Larry Tucker, Lewis senior. Joe Sclafani, 5-10 senior at New Haven, won in free-throw accuracy, nudging another Connecticut player, Bridgeport's Mark Butigan, 87.8 to 87.7 percent.

REBOUNDING

Kelly, Pollard

State's Darrell Stith led all 1983 seniors with 2,559 points. Sacred Heart's Keith Bennett had 2.431. District of Columbia's Michael Britt 2,348 and Stith's teammate, Julius Norman, 2,238. Stith's career average is 22.3. In rebounds, it was Britt (1,107) and Norman (1,027). Tucker finished fifth in all-time field-goal accuracy at 65.9 and Bryan Vacca of Randolph-Macon fourth in freethrow accuracy at 87.9 percent.

Men's Division III leaders

Shannon Lilly, 5-10 senior guard at Bishop, took the scoring crown at 34.9 to 31.7 for Otterbein senior Ron Stewart. For his size, Lilly amazingly shot 67.1 percent from the field (No. 2 nationally) and 87.9 at the line (No. 3 nationally). Luis Frias, 6-5 junior at Anna Maria, won the rebound championship, 13.9 to 13.5 over Aurora junior Joe Weber. Mike Johnson, 6-5 senior at Drew, edged Lilly for the field-goal title with 67.3 percent. The free-throw accuracy title went to Eureka's Mike Sain, a 5-10 senior, 91.7 percent to 90.4 for Wisconsin-Platteville senior Mike Ehler.

On the career charts, Will Petersen of St. Andrews, a native of the Virgin Islands, reached third on the Division III list at 2,553 points, edging the 5-10 Stewart, fourth at 2,549. Stewart's average, though, is 24.0 to 22.0 for Petersen. Ithaca's Tod Hart reached fourth in fieldgoal accuracy at 64.1.

(Final Divisions II and III rankings were in the April 27 issue of The NCAA News.)

Women's Division II leaders

Multicategory leaders abound in Division II. Not least among them is Stacey Cunningham, the 1983 scoring champion. Cunningham, a Shippensburg State junior, not only averaged 29.9 points per game but shot 55.5 percent from the field (15th) and 80.3 percent from the free-throw line

(also ranking 15th). Morris Brown senior Jackie Andrews is the fieldgoal percentage champion at 67.0, and New Haven senior Cindy Pavell won the free-throw percentage championship at 87.4. Pavell's 58.5 fieldgoal shooting also places her 11th in that category. Chanel Hamilton, a junior at District of Columbia, is the rebound leader with a startling 21.0 per-game average. Hamilton is the type of player a coach dreams of turning loose on the court—she's an offensive and defensive threat, with a 21.6 scoring average (11th) and 57.7 field-goal percentage (13th). Four others packing a one-two punch were Belmont-Abbey junior Cissy Little (29.6 in scoring and 14.2 in rebounding), Brenda Satcher, a senior at Mississippi University for Women 25.7 and 12.8), Dayton junior Donna Burks (22.1 and 12.4) and California-Riverside senior Donna Hammond-

1. CHEYNEY STATE

Jody Imbrie, a senior at Grove City, is the 1983 Division III scoring champ at 28.5 points per game. Field-goal percentage leader Debbie Litten from Bridgewater (Virginia) edged Rust freshman Brenda Christion, shooting 60.3 to Christion's 60.0. St. Olaf senior Tammy Metcalf's 85.5 shooting from the line won the free-throw percentage championship, and Massachusetts-Boston junior Jennifer Allen won the rebounding title with a 16.7 average. Litten and Christion left their marks on other lists as well. Litten averaged 18.0 points per game and Christion 14.0 rebounds per game. Other noteworthy scoring-rebounding efforts came from Monica Cummings, Rutgers-Camden (23.5 and 14.5), Leslie Rushton, Drew (22.8 and 15.3) and Debbie L'Italien, Curry (20.6 and 13.9).

Mustangs seeking first tennis title

Southern Methodist will try to end the 10-year domination by California schools and a surprising sophomore from Utah will be shooting for the singles title in the 1983 NCAA Division I Men's Tennis Championships May 14-22 in Athens, Georgia.

Ranked No. 1 as of mid-April, the Mustangs will be in the running for the team title, which would be their first. The title has remained on the West Coast since Trinity (Texas) won in 1972. The Mustangs finished third last year and again are led by Rodney Harmon (ranked ninth nationally in singles) and Eric Korita (No. 10).

Trinity, ranked No. 5, also hopes to break the California string. Between Southern Methodist and Trinity, however, are three schools from the Golden State—Southern California, Pepperdine and defending champion UCLA.

Defending singles champion Mike Leach of Michigan has graduated, and hoping to step in is Utah's Greg Holmes. He was a first-round loser in last year's championship but vaulted to the top of the rankings earlier this winter.

Behind Holmes in the singles rankings is Tennessee's Paul Annacone. Princeton's Ted Farnsworth and Pepperdine's John Van Nostrand are tied for third. Jonny Levine of Texas is ranked fifth.

It is conceivable that the doubles title could go to a non-Division I tandem for the first time in history. Division II power Southern Illinois-Edwardsville's top team of Ken Flach and Robert Seguso has headed the national rankings throughout the regular season.

Division II

Add up Flach, Seguso, Doug Burke, John Sjoren, Raimo O'Jala and Joe Vassen, and it is pretty obvious why the 1983 Division II Men's Tennis Championships could be the same song, seventh verse.

All six of those Southern Illinois-Edwardsville regulars are ranked in the division's top 20. They should be enough to give Kent DeMars' Cougars a seventh straight team title.

Flach will be aiming for his third straight singles title, an unparalleled accomplishment in Division II tournament history. He beat Seguso in last year's final and teamed with Burke to win the doubles championship.

Trailing the Cougars in the team rankings are Rollins, Chapman, Hayward State and Hampton Institute. Central Florida's Mike DeFranco is ranked third in singles behind Flach and Seguso, while Rollins' Brian Talgo is ranked fifth behind Burke.

The championships will be held May 9-15 in San Marcos, Texas. Southwest Texas State will be the host institution.

Division III

Former NAIA power Redlands appears to head the field for the 1983 NCAA Division III Men's Tennis Championships May 9-15 in Albary, New York.

The Bulldogs are ranked No. I in the division and own a pair of dual-match victories over second-ranked Claremont-Mudd-Scripps. Erik Michelson and Joe Alamo both have played at the top of Redlands' lineup, and both are expected to contend for the singles title.

Donovan Jones, 1981 Division III singles titlist, leads Claremont-Mudd-Scripps. Third-ranked Swarthmore is led by Steve Brown, a quarterfinalist in last year's singles championship.

Others to watch include Alex Gaeta, Rochester; Dave Sider, California-San Diego; Paul Brauner, Principia, and Mark Nys, Claremont-Mudd-Scripps. Defending team champion Gustavus Adolphus was hit hard by graduation but can count on Rich Skanse, who teamed with graduated singles winner Shaun Miller to win last year's doubles championship.

Trojans remain top contender in Division I women's tennis

Preseason favorite Southern California still is on the hot seat and will head into the 1983 NCAA Division I Women's Tennis Championships May 14-22 in Albuquerque, New Mexico, as the favorite.

The top-ranked Trojans return five letter winners from last year's third-place team and have added two top freshmen in Beth Herr (ranked fifth nationally in singles) and Janet LaGasse (No. 25). The top returning veteran is Kelly Henry (No. 8), who advanced to last year's singles semifinals.

Trinity (Texas) will rely on the one-two punch of veteran Louise Allen (No. 3) and freshman Gretchen Rush (No. 4). Defending team champion Stanford lost No. 1 singles player and 1982 NCAA champion Alycia Moulton but has moved to the No. 3 slot in the team rankings behind the play of Elise Burgin, 1983's topranked singles player.

Rounding out the top five in the team rankings are 1982 NCAA runner-up UCLA and San Diego State. Newcomer Barb Gerken (No. 7 nationally) has paced the Bruins, while San Diego State has received steady play from Micki Schillig (No. 2) and Cindy MacGregor (No. 6). Schillig lost to Moulton in last year's NCAA singles final.

Defending NCAA doubles titlist Heather Ludloff returns at UCLA, but her partner, Lynn Lewis, is being redshirted.

Division II

A reshuffling of power on the West Coast and an influx of former AIAW powers could lead to a wide-open field in the 1983 NCAA Division II Women's Tennis Championships May 9-14 at Pomona, California.

Defending NCAA team champion Northridge State and runner-up Bakersfield State are rebuilding this spring. Stepping into that vacuum in the West region have been California-Davis (third in last year's NCAA championship), 1983 tournament host Cal Poly-Pomona (fourth in 1982), Cal Poly-San Luis Obispo and Northern Colorado.

Notre Dame, Tennessee-Chattanooga, Georgetown and Stetson will be in their first year of NCAA play after ranking among the AIAW's divisional powers. Last year's fifth-, sixth- and seventh-place NCAA finishers—Southern Illinois-Edwards-ville, Morehead State and Florida Southern, respectively—also could figure in this year's team-title chase.

Individuals to watch include Suzanne Kuhlman, Georgetown; Helen Nazar, California-Davis; Joan Finder, Southern Illinois-Edwardsville; Pam Yates, Tennessee-Chattanooga; Sandra Elliott, Northern Colorado; Debbie Strombeck, Bakersfield State; Allison Avey, Florida Southern; Helen Curtis, Morehead State; Laura Lee and Mary Colligan, Notre Dame; Diane Daniels, Mary Holycross and Carmen Gomez Gomez, Cal Poly-Pomona, and Lori Moss and Lisa Ehrgott, Cal Poly-San Luis Obispo.

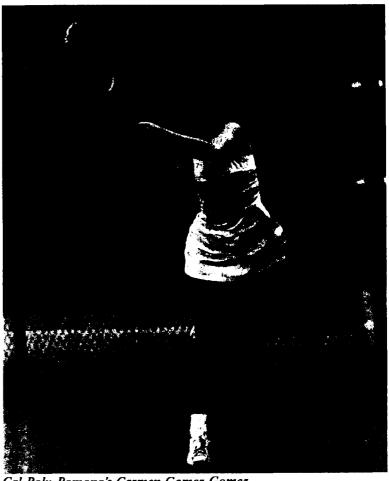

Division III

Occidental will be trying to defend its team title when the NCAA Division III Women's Tennis Championships are held May 9-14 in Claremont, California.

The Tigers return top player Jean Marie Sanders, who was runner-up in last year's singles championship. Among the teams that could be challenging Occidental are California-San Diego, Pomona-Pitzer, Gettysburg, Mary Washington, William Paterson, North Carolina-Greensboro, Principia, DePauw and Kalamazoo.

Other top individuals include Cathy Sturdivant and Lisa Gilbert, California-San Diego; Lynn Waddell, Stanislaus State; Rachel Steele, Lake Forest; Jane Nelson, Wheaton (Illinois); Connie O'Neill, Wisconsin-Whitewater; Claire Slaughter, Trinity (Connecticut); Eileen Smith, Wheaton (Massachusetts); Susan Lochiatto, Salem State; Nanette Huff, Millsaps; Cathy Healy, Mary Washington; Nancy Sharkey, William Paterson, and Amy Brown, North Carolina-Greensboro.

UCLA set to defend softball championship

It looks like Debbie Doom and the UCLA Bruins may get a chance to defend their NCAA softball title.

UCLA is the top-ranked team in the West region as the start of competition nears for the 1983 NCAA Division I Women's Softball Championship. The Bruins, 24-4, swept seven games in last year's event, allowing just one run. Doom pitched all five victories in the Softball College World Series, surrendering one run in 412/3 innings and striking out 62.

Play begins at selected first-round sites May 13-14, with the Softball College World Series, an eight-team, double-elimination tournament, again scheduled for Creighton University in Omaha, Nebraska. This year's dates are May 25-29.

The NCAA Women's Softball Committee will select 10 teams on an at-large basis to join six automaticqualifying conference champions. UCLA may qualify automatically as a member of the Western Collegiate Athletic Association, but Fullerton State currently leads the league.

Through games of April 23, the only other participant from the finals series in 1982 that is top-ranked in its conference (Northern Pacific Athletic Conference) is Fresno State. Other conference leaders (highest-ranked by the committee, not necessarily first place in league play) include Missouri (Big Eight Conference), Central Michigan (Mid-American Athletic Conference), Eastern Illinois (Gateway Collegiate Athletic Conference) and Indiana (Big Ten Conference).

At least one team will be selected from each of eight regions designated by the committee. Other strong teams will be moved from their natural regions to fill the bracket as necessary.

For example, three of the top four teams as ranked in a recent unofficial poll of collegiate coaches are in the NCAA's West region: UCLA, Fullerton State and Cal Poly-Pomona.

Other teams that appear to be top national contenders include Texas A&M, making its first appearance in NCAA softball competition; Oklahoma State, and South Carolina.

Teams currently under consideration for selection by the NCAA committee, by region, include (record through games of April 23):

West-UCLA (24-4), Fullerton State (41-10), Cal Poly-Pomona (31-14), Arizona State (18-14), Arizona (14-13), Cal-Santa Barbara (15-17), San Diego State (10-14-1) and U.S. International (15-22-1).

Florida Southern rates as favorite

When the Division II baseball teams started competition for the 1983 season, the question on many observers' minds was whether 1982 champion California-Riverside and runner-up Florida Southern would repeat the memorable battle they staged during the 1982 finals series.

As selection time for the 1983 Division II Baseball Championship nears, such a rematch still is possible. This time, though, Florida Southern (41-5 through April 25) is the early favorite. Cal-Riverside probably is the best team in the West and may be among the top five nationally.

It also appears that the power in Division II resides in the South, with seven of the top 10 ranked teams in a recent national poll from that area. Florida Southern and Eckerd (31-7), both members of the Sunshine State Conference, may be the best teams in

Selections for the 1983 championship will be made May 9 by the Division II subcommittee of the NCAA Baseball Committee. First-round play will begin May 13-14. The finals series will be played May 21-25, again

A maximum of 20 teams will be selected by the subcommittee, with all teams selected on an at-large basis. The Northeast, South Atlantic, Central and Midwest regionals will consist of at least two and not more than four teams; the South and West regionals may consist of only two teams.

Top teams, by region, currently under consideration include:

Cal Poly-Pomona and Cal-Riverside.

Northeast-C. W. Post, Le Moyne, Lowell, Mercy, New Haven, Quinnipiac and Springfield.

Eastern Connecticut leads Division III softball teams

If regular-season performance is an indicator, the 1983 NCAA Division III Women's Softball Championship could be a repeat of the 1982 tournament.

Eastern Connecticut State, a 2-0 winner over Trenton State in the 1982 finals, is rated No. 1 by the Division III subcommittee of the NCAA Women's Softball Committee. Trenton State is ranked third, with newcomer Glassboro State close

The results thus far are not surprising. Both Eastern Connecticut State (21-4 through April 27) and Trenton State (29-4) had two outstanding veteran pitchers returning.

Aurora's Katie Keller

Glassboro State (16-4) has done somewhat better than expected but was rated a preseason contender in its region.

Sixteen teams will compete in the 1983 Division III event, with firstround play scheduled May 13-14 at six sites. The winners will advance to the finals series, scheduled for May 21-24 at Eastern Connecticut State College in Willimantic, Connecticut.

At least one team from each of six regions established by the subcommittee will be selected for championship competition, including three automatic-qualifying champions from selected conferences. The remaining teams will be chosen at large.

Early leaders from those conferences include Glassboro State and Trenton State from the Jersey Athletic Conference, Buena Vista from the Iowa Intercollegiate Athletic Conference, and Salem State and Westfield State from the Massachusetts State College Athletic Confer-

Tighter competition should highlight the 1983 NCAA Division III Men's Lacrosse Championship but many observers feel that three-time defending champion Hobart again will emerge as champion May 22 at a campus site to be determined.

"One of the teams in the final game will be Hobart," said Roanoke coach John Pirro. "If there is a team in the play-offs capable of controlling its running game, and if that team can figure out a way to score some goals on them (Hobart), we could have a new champion."

Pirro's squad has fashioned a fine season, including victories over playoff contenders Salisbury State and Ithaca.

Rookie coach Terry Corcoran has guided Washington (Maryland) through a season that has seen the Shoremen hold every Division III opponent to single-digit goal production. "Even though we had some very strong attack people returning, I believe our defense has been the strong point so far," Corcoran said.

"Offensively, we need to start shooting better. We have made some goalies look very good this season. We'll have to start scoring more goals if we expect to advance in the tournament."

Another first-year coach who is guiding his team toward the play-offs is Salisbury State's Hank Janczyk. "Most of the season has been one of transition for the team," Janczyk said. "They have been learning a lot of new concepts, and I think they are still adapting to our coaching philosophy.

"Our defense has been solid throughout the year, and we are working on improving our settled offense. When we can't run the ball right up the field and get a shot, we need to be more patient and look for the good shot or draw a foul."

If good defense is the key in tournament play, then Ithaca is another team to watch. Coach Ray Rostan has watched his Bombers improve in that area all year long.

"Defense definitely has been our strong point. Our close defense has performed very well and so has our long-stick unit. We have good depth on the team, and we've added some power people offensively."

Other potential contenders for the championship are Ohio Wesleyan, Cortland State and Middlebury. But it seems the road to the final game eventually will lead to Geneva, New York, and the Hobart Statesmen.

"I guess we are in an enviable position," said Hobart coach Dave Urick. "We are the big game for almost everyone on our schedule, and that has kept us on our toes. And we're in a good position right now with no major injuries. We just need to maintain our edge."

Sizing up the Statesmen was not very difficult for Urick. "Our defense has been strong and we have had balanced scoring, too. I think we have enough depth to wear people down as well."

Five teams contend for title

Versatility may be the key to analyzing the 1983 NCAA Women's Lacrosse Championship, which begins May 11 with first-round games at campus sites. Among the contenders for the title are defending champion Massachusetts, 1982 Association for Intercollegiate Athletics for Women (AIAW) champion Temple, Penn State, Maryland and 1982 AIAW Division II champion Delaware.

"I really believe the team that displays the most versatility, both offensively and defensively, will become the champion," said Penn State coach Gillian Rattray. Her Lady Lions had the makings of an undefeated season before Temple snapped a 39-game home-winning streak by taking a 12-11 decision in early April.

"That was the turning point for us," Rattray continued. "Against Temple, our defense allowed itself to be intimidated, and that group has decided not to lose by intimidation again. I think the thing we need to work on defensively is the ability to go in and out of the zone defense effectively."

Temple coach Tina Sloan-Green called the victory at Penn State "a real plus for us. We played Penn, Penn State and Delaware in consecutive games and were able to win two of the three. That was very important for us.

"We have played very consistent lacrosse all season. Our defense has done well, but our attack is our strong point. We have five people who can put the ball in the cage. When our defense holds an opponent to five or six goals and our attack is on, we are simply tough to beat."

Maryland will be another tough play-off squad, but head coach Suzanne Tyler is concerned about two key injuries. "Tammy Duncan suffered ligament damage to a knee, and Celine Flinn was injured recently, too. Those two were basically in charge of running things on defense, and we really don't have the kind of depth to replace both of them. If we get them back, I am confident we will do well. If they are not available, that means we will have to work a lot harder as a team to take up the slack."

Delaware head coach Janet Smith has experienced the thrill of winning a team title and has led the Hens through a regular season that included a victory over Temple.

"Our passing game is our strong suit, although the defense has been a very solid unit for us thus far," Smith explained. "The overall teamwork we have displayed may be our biggest plus. Each player realizes that we are not depending on one or two people to get the job done."

While not relying heavily on one player, Massachusetts coach Pam Hixon admits that a lot of her squad's 1983 success should be credited to goalkeeper Rita Hubner.

"Rita has been incredible. As far as I'm concerned, she is one of the best goalkeepers around. She had 26 saves in our victory over Harvard; and when you have that kind of game, it helps the defense and also helps the offense get the ball down the field for scoring opportunities."

Blue Jays reach 100 in lacrosse

Lacrosse at Johns Hopkins University recently moved into its second century of action as the Blue Jays defeated Army, 9-6, in the school's centennial game.

More than 350 former Hopkins players attended the event April 16 and joined a crowd of more than 5,000 in a tribute to 100 years of lacrosse competition at the varsity level.

"It was a really great day," said Robert H. Scott, director of athletics at Johns Hopkins. "Everything fell into place... the weather, the game, the victory, the large crowd and their spirit. Even the game program was perfect."

Special half-time ceremonies honored Blue Jay players who competed for Hopkins more than 50 years ago. Included among the honorees were 1919 team captain Herbert Baxley; 1920 team captain Ferdinand Meyer, and Julian Marshall, who played during the 1911 season.

During its first century of competition, Johns Hopkins won 38 national championships in lacrosse, including four NCAA titles. The Blue Jays have been in every NCAA Division I championship game since 1976 and boast a winning percentage of .767 (23-7) in NCAA play-off action.

ECAC approves implementation of women's programs

A proposal to incorporate women's intercollegiate athletic interests into all governing groups of the Eastern College Athletic Conference was approved overwhelmingly April 27 by the league membership during the organization's spring meeting in Atlantic City, New Jersey.

The plan provides representation of primary women athletic administrators from the 237 ECAC member institutions on the ECAC executive council, infractions committee and eligibility committee. The plan will go into effect October 5, 1983, after the election of new committee members.

A new structure in the ECAC also has been established by the plan. Separate steering committees, one for men's athletics and one for women's, will be organized, and each will be composed of men's and women's representatives.

"We are very pleased with this plan, which, for the first time, consolidates both men's and women's intercollegiate athletic interests in the East under one administrative structure, "said Commissioner Robert M. "Scotty" Whitelaw. "We all are looking forward to working with the talented primary women athletic administrators, whose leadership will help strengthen ECAC services and programs."

Passage of the plan also means the ECAC will sponsor women's championships in 11 sports in the 1983-84 academic year. The tentative list of sports is basketball, field hockey, cross country, track, golf, lacrosse, ice hockey, softball, swimming, tennis and volleyball. The dates and sites for all women's championships will be determined after the women's steering committee and the sports committees are organized.

Non-ECAC members holding active membership in the EAIAW will be granted 'guest privileges' for participation in women's championships in 1983-84.

"We are pleased to have traversed successfully the difficult path of reorganization through the cooperation of the ECAC governance committee and the leadership of the EAIAW," said ECAC President Edward S. Steitz of Springfield College. "Both groups negotiated firmly, taking to heart the best interests of the women student-athletes on our campuses. The amendments to the ECAC constitution, which were endorsed heartily as the governance plan, will ensure the quality representation of the women's athletic interests in the ECAC and the continuation and extension of championship opportunities for women student-athletes at the diverse and heterogeneous ECAC member colleges. The consolidation is a testimony to the commitment of the conference athletic administrators."

"The decision by the EAIAW membership ... for consolidation obviously represents a belief on behalf of the membership that the best interests of women student-athletes would be served by the combined structure," said ECAC President Sharon Taylor of Lock Haven State

College. "Hopefully, through consolidation, service and championship opportunities and competition will be enhanced for women collegiate athletes. Many people who have served in leadership roles in the EAIAW are looking forward to continuing to work for the development of programs that will benefit women student-athletes in the East."

The ECAC will begin assigning officials to women's sports this year, beginning with soccer, ice hockey and basketball. The conference is looking toward long-term expansion to include full-scale officiating services for the entire range of women's athletics.

VFY seminars planned in June

Exchanging ideas and stabilizing programs are among the goals of the 1983 series of NCAA Volunteers for Youth summer seminar/workshops to be held in June at four regional sites. Student-athletes from 54 colleges and universities will participate in the sessions in their roles as student directors of local VFY chapters. These student directors are responsible for the coordination of the one-to-one friendship program.

The 1983 sessions will be held June 3-5 at the University of Alabama, Tuscaloosa; June 10-12 at Lafayette College; June 17-19 at the University of Notre Dame, and June 24-26 at San Jose State University.

The seminar/workshops provide an opportunity for campus leaders to share ideas with one another and with the national staff.

"The student directors will have a chance to find out what is happening at other institutions," said Audrey West, VFY assistant senior director and national coordinator for the 1983 workshops. "National staff members will facilitate several training discussions, covering everything from fund-raising and volunteer recruitment to problem-solving and planning. The most valuable aspect of each workshop, though, is the exchange of ideas between each director group. They really develop a feeling of camaraderie and an understanding that we are all in this together."

Steve Wenger, senior national director, believes there is a direct correlation between the stability of local programs and representation from those institutions at the previous year's seminar/workshop program.

"I have attended at least one session each summer since the VFY started," Wenger said. "I am convinced that, with few exceptions, programs that have three or four student directors at a workshop improve markedly during the next year. Programs with limited or no participation often struggle to get started."

Wenger said that athletic directors and VFY advisors at participating institutions can help by encouraging their student directors to attend one of the seminar/workshop sessions.

"The students seem to respond when there is support from the athletic department staff," he said. "It is not magic, but when 30 or 40 talented and energetic student-athletes congregate for a weekend to discuss and improve something they believe in, things happen. They carry their enthusiasm into the fall term."

The four sessions are sponsored by the VFY national staff and funded by an NCAA grant. West emphasized that expenses will be paid from the national budget for four student directors from each VFY institution to attend the seminar/workshop held closest to their summer residences.

"We even will arrange car pools," she added. "We believe in the value of these summer programs, so we are trying to make it as easy as possible for students to attend."

The 1982-83 and 1983-84 national staffs will be involved as facilitators for the summer conferences. The workshops will be the first national-level assignment for 1983-84 directors Sally Alden, Betsy Mullins, Keith Staser, Craig Thompson and Bryan Thoreson. Outgoing staff members who will be involved are David Bishop, Carl Howell, Kim Seckler and Debby Stroman.

Campus chapters were established at five NCAA member institutions during the 1982-83 academic year, bringing the total participating to 54 institutions and more than 3,500 student-athletes and youths. The new programs were established at the University of Alabama, Birmingham; Boise State University; University of Notre Dame; University of Colorado, and University of Texas, El Paso.

Division I soccer champion falls

Though it was not a regular-season match, the 1982 NCAA Division II men's soccer champion Florida International upset reigning Division I champion Indiana, 5-1, last month in a spring tournament in Durham, North Carolina.

The two-day tournament matched the Sunblazers, Hoosiers, Division III champion North Carolina-Greensboro and Division I runner-up Duke. The host Blue Devils won the tourney by defeating North Carolina-Greensboro, 3-1, and Indiana, 2-0, in a rematch of last year's record eight-overtime NCAA final Florida International, following its surprisingly easy victory over Indiana, tied North Carolina-Greensboro, 2-2.

Classification petitions due from institutions by June 1

June 1 is the deadline for member institutions to petition the Classification Committee for a change in division membership or multisport classifications as dictated by the provisions of Bylaws 10-3 and 10-4.

Any institution planning a change in membership classification or multisport classification in a men's or women's sport may obtain a copy of the official petition form by contacting Shirley Whitacre, membership coordinator, at the national office.

The Classification Committee, chaired by Capt. J. O. Coppedge of the U.S. Naval Academy, will meet June 23 in Kansas City to consider all current requests for changes in division classification.

The committee will determine if those requesting a change meet the applicable membership criteria, as set forth in Bylaw 11, of the division to which the transfer is planned. The committee also must consider whether the institution has operated in conformity will all other bylaw requirements of the division for a two-year period preceding June 1.

If all requirements are met, the member will be transferred to the new division effective September 1, 1983, or any date subsequent to September 1 the applicant chooses as the effective date of transfer.

Any institution choosing to change division membership or multisport classification must remain in the new division for three years. The committee also will consider applications for new membership.

Georgia Southern to get stadium

Georgia Southern College has begun construction of a 20,000-seat stadium to be completed by the 1984 football season. Estimated cost is between $3 million and $4.5 million, according to Erk Russell, head football coach.

Last season, the Eagles played home games at a high school field with a seating capacity of 7,000.

"It will mean everything to our program," Russell said. He guided Georgia Southern to a 7-3-1 record last season, the first for the institution since dropping football in the 1940s. "It will mean a great deal in recruiting, and people will realize we are really serious about having a football program

Institution adds two sports

Men's volleyball and swimming will be added to the sports program at St. Francis College (Pennsylvania), beginning with the 1983-84 academic year.

"I look for further expansion of our intercollegiate and intramural programs in the future," said the Rev. Christian R. Oravec, college president. Athletic Director Arthur Martynuska said the institution is in the process of studying other sports for future implementation.

St. Francis now will compete in NCAA Division I in eight sports and in Division III in football.

Hornung files suit in Kansas

Paul Hornung, former collegiate and professional football star, has filed a $3 million defamation-of-character suit against the NCAA in Johnson

The suit is identical to one filed last August in Kentucky. Hornung's lawyer said the Kansas suit is a precautionary move. If the Kentucky suit is dismissed for lack of jurisdiction, as the NCAA has argued it should be, then Hornung will seek a court date in Kansas.

Both suits stem from a decision by the NCAA last year in which Hornung was turned down as a broadcaster of intercollegiate football games produced by Turner Broadcasting Corporation.

Spirit Express to tour country

Athletes in Action, which earlier this year combined its United States and Canadian basketball teams to form one North American team based in Vancouver, British Columbia, has been replaced in the United States by Spirit Express.

Composed of former college player, Spirit Express will tour the country as a member of the Amateur Athletic Union and play exhibition games with colleges and universities.

Former Athletes in Action assistant coach Eldon Lawyer will be the head coach of the Spirit Express team. Lawyer currently is organizing the team's 1983-84 schedule and can be reached at 901/345-0258.

NBC seeks to expand coverage

Although no longer the carrying network for the NCAA Division I Men's Basketball Championship, NBC-TV apparently is determined to remain competitive with rival CBS-TV in terms of regular-season coverage.

NBC has signed contracts for the 1983-84 season with the Big East, Big Ten and Atlantic Coast Conferences. The network—which lost the rights to the NCAA championship to CBS in 1982—will have first selection rights in the ACC, equal rights in the Big Ten and secondary rights in the Big East.

Beyond these existing agreements, NBC is conducting negotiations with the Southeastern, Southwest, Big Eight, Pacific-10 and Metro Conferences. Negotiations also are under way with several independents.

Temporary injunction halts application of NCAA rule

A North Carolina Federal district court in Durham has granted Chaim Arlosoroff a preliminary injunction against the NCAA, enjoining application of NCAA Bylaw 5-1-(d)-(3) common-age rule] to his eli gibility.

The suit by Arlosoroff alleges that the NCAA rule charging studentathletes with a season of eligibility for each year of organized competition after their 20th birthdays discriminates against foreign students and is nonconstitutional.

Under the rule, which applies only at Division I member institutions, student-athletes are charged with one year of eligibility for each 12-month period, after their 20th birthdays and prior to enrollment in an NCAA member institution, in which any organized competition takes place. Arlosoroff had utilized three years eligibility under this rule prior to entering Duke. Accordingly, he had no championship eligibility remaining in the sport of tennis after competing in 1981-82 as a freshman.

Arlosoroff is a former Israeli Davis Cup player. He was discharged from the Israeli army in March 1979 after his 20th birthday. Between then and August 1981, when he entered Duke, presented Israel in several Davis Cup matches and participated in other organized tennis competition.

NCAA attorneys argued that the rule applies to all student-athletes and not merely to foreign students and is a "valid exercise of NCAA legislative power which does not violate the constitutional standards of equal protection of the laws or due process of law.'

The rule went into effect in August 1980 and has been applied to the eligibility of all student-athletes initially enrolling in a member institution after that date

The injunction was issued by U.S. District Court Judge Richard Erwin. Arlosoroff will be able to play for Duke until an appeal of the injunction is heard or the case is reversed on its governing the amateur sport. In her August 20 ruling, Aldrich also ordered the WD/AAU to end its ties with FILA, the Switzerland-based organizer of world-class wrestling compe-

The court ruling allowed Simon to substitute the word "terminating" for "suspending" the WD/AAU and put United States wrestling under one

After Aldrich's decision, a panel led by Simon restructured the national governing body and formed the USWA, an interim national governing body that functioned on an ad hoc basis until USA Wrestling was formed March 13 and 14 in Oklahoma City, Oklahoma. Former members of the USWF Governing Council constituted a substantial majority of the new members of the USWA Board of Directors. The WD/AAU and some of its member organizations participated in the USWA, although the WD/AAU continues to maintain that it should be the national governing body. The WD/ AAU appealed Aldrich's decision to the United States Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit in Cincinnati, where deliberations have begun.

The WD/AAU was back in Aldrich's court after the USOC alleged that the organization had ignored her August 20 ruling. The USOC contended that "meddling" by the WD/ AAU nearly cost a U.S. wrestling team the chance to compete in the Greco-Roman Cup matches in Buda pest, Hungary, last November.

According to USA Wrestling President Werner Holzer, who led the wrestling contingent to Budapest, American wrestlers almost were denied a chance to compete because of confusion over the "governing body" issue. After two days of meetings in Budapest, FILA grudgingly permitted American wrestlers to compete.

A motion subsequently was brought by the USOC asking that the WD/ AAU be held in contempt of court. The USOC asked Aldrich to reenforce her previous ruling and order the AAU to pay $25,000 and court costs to the USOC.

The threat of a contempt charge apparently has quelled any further action by the WD/AAU. It also is expected that FILA, which supported the reorganization of the USWF, will recognize USA Wrestling as its U.S. member at a meeting this month.

USA Wrestling Executive Director Steve Combs said the new governing body has organized its board of directors and confirmed the organization's constitution and bylaws, and he said that officers and members of the executive committee have been elected. Combs also said recognition from FILA has improved steadily since last

'Their (FILA) president (Milan Ercegan) was surprised somewhat that we have moved as rapidly as we have," Combs said. "We met with him last January, and they had been dragging their feet up until then.

"The only negatives we've heard from the FILA president were that he still felt more AAU people should be in the existing structure, and he questioned the size of the board and a few other organizational aspects."

The USA Wrestling governing body consists of a 44-person board of directors and a 13-person executive committee. At its meeting last March in Oklahoma City, the board of directors elected officers and an executive committee to serve until 1984. The executive committee consists of six USWA officers, four additional directors (two of whom are WD/AAU nominees) and three active athletes.

Despite acceptance from USOC and the expected recognition frm FILA, Combs said the WD/AAU probably will attempt to regain its status as the national governing body.

"For the most part, the AAU representatives within the USA Wrestling structure are not fighting the new organization," Combs said. "The outside reaction is that they will pursue legal action to reverse the Federal district judge's decision.

"If the court does reverse itself, we'll simply base our case on the USOC House of Delegates vote to recognize officially USA Wrestling as its newest member. The only way for them to get us out now is to come back to the USOC and prove that we are not the best organization for amateur wrest-

Wide reforms in education urged

The government-sponsored National Commission on Excellence in Education has called for a wide range of education reforms to reverse "a rising tide of mediocrity" in the nation's secondary schools

The commission, chaired by David P. Gardner, president of the University of Utah, and member of the Select Committee on Athletic Problems and Concerns in Higher Education, was appointed by Education Secretary Terrel H. Bell in 1980. The report was released in late April.

Bell has called the report as important as a landmark 1958 study of American education following the Russians' launch of Sputnik, the first space vehicle.

The report links a strengthening of the educational system to the nation's economic success and the ability to compete in a worldwide technological society.

The basic reforms call for more work for students, more pay for teachers, and more attention by parents and guardians to their children's education.

The report says that state and local officials have "the primary responsibility for financing and governing the schools," with the Federal role limited to special needs of "key groups of students" such as those of exceptional ability and of economic disadvantage.

Secretary Bell contends that funds for the recommended improvements will have to come from state legislatures because of Federal deficits.

The report, entitled "A Nation at Risk: The Imperative for Educational Reform," includes these recommen-

•Tougher standards for graduation from high school, including requirements that students take more of the 'new basics," including stronger courses in English, social science, mathematics, science and computers.

•A longer school day and school year, from the current 180 days of about six hours each to 200 to 220 days of seven hours each.

Significantly more homework for high school students.

 Tougher admissions standards at four-year colleges and universities.

 Higher salaries for teachers, based on performance so that superior teachers can be rewarded and poor ones either improved or terminated.

 More stringent educational requirements for those planning to teach. The report says that too many teachers are being drawn from the bottom quarter of graduating high school and college students.

 Foreign-language study beginning in elementary school and continuing until each student has achieved a proficiency in a foreign language that would serve that nation's needs in commerce, diplomacy, defense and education.
